

Parent and Child Emotions Study (PACES)

Has your child experienced trauma?

Have you experienced trauma?

Families with a family history of trauma (parent and child) and who have a child between the ages of 9-12 years old are invited to participate in PACES, a research study designed to help us learn how we can better help children adjust after a traumatic event.

What is involved in participating in PACES?

- Participation takes place remotely from your home right now: Adults complete an on-line survey about stressful events that have occurred in your and your child's life. Kids answer questions about their emotions during a 30-45 minute on-line video chat with a member of the study staff.
- In about 6-12 months (as long as there are no COVID restrictions), you and your child will meet with study staff for a 2.5 hour in-person visit to complete additional questionnaires and participate in activities together.
- Families will receive $50 in gift cards for completing the on-line portion and an additional $100 in gift cards for the in-person visit.

CLICK HERE to see if you are eligible to participate. Or scan the QR Code.

For more information, contact the PACES Research Team:

860-523-6458

PACES@uchc.edu

